Johnson Creek

Johnson Creek 2.5 Miles Long
Level 5-7 ~ 3-4 Hour Tour $75.00
Launch from the "VFW Bridge" mustered into the new frontier of kayaking, once known for great fishing, the forgotten Creek! Kayak thru the windy creek as the water flowed hundreds of years ago, great for Sunrise tours as well.
Plenty of birds, muskrats, sea life, picturesque scenery where it leads us to a working waterman harbor to be greeted by waterman and our ride back to The Kayak Crisfield headquarters. This is a one way tour and we will go out with the tide. Tour is upon availability of tide chart.
